

Excerpt from NASDAQ, September 10, 2020

<https://www.nasdaq.com/articles/5-etfs-jump-after-three-day-rout%3A-will-the-rally-last-2020-09-10>

Also, in Zacks

5 ETFs Jump After Three-Day Rout: Will The Rally Last?

After the three-day rout, Wall Street bounced back as investors jumped to buy the dip in stocks. The rebound was broad-based yet the stocks that had plunged the most in the market rout recovered the most. Tesla TSLA popped 11% on the day, after slumping 21% in its worst-ever trading day, while

This technology sector, which had pushed the Nasdaq Composite Index into correction territory, outperformed in the Sep 9 trading session. Notably, the S&P Tech sector notched its biggest one-day percentage gain since Apr 29

....

Given this, we have highlighted those ETFs that were at the forefront of the market rebound on Sep 9 and will continue to do so if market sentiments remain positive:

....

Invesco WilderHill Clean Energy ETF PBW – Up 4.4%

This fund provides exposure to U.S. companies engaged in the business of advancement of cleaner energy and conservation. It follows the WilderHill Clean Energy Index and holds about 42 stocks in its basket. The fund has AUM of $615.5 million in its asset base and charges 70 bps in annual fees (read: Why Clean Energy ETFs Are Top Performers in 2020).